

Loyola University Chicago Stritch School of Medicine is pleased to announce The Louis W. Sullivan, MD, Scholars Program in Bioethics & Health Policy

The Sullivan Scholars Program

Named for the founding Dean of the Morehouse School of Medicine and former Secretary of Health and Human Services, the Sullivan Scholarships are offered to under-represented minority faculty of colleges and universities who wish to enhance their research and teaching in bioethics and health policy.

The two awardees will receive a half-tuition scholarship toward a Master of Arts degree in Bioethics & Health Policy. The remaining tuition paid by awardees will be specifically earmarked for the minority scholarship program at the Stritch School of Medicine, helping to support minority medical students and thus create a more diverse workforce in medicine.

The Loyola Master of Arts degree in Bioethics & Health Policy is the only distance education program in the United States that can be taken entirely online. The program attracts physicians, nurses, lawyers, administrators, social workers, chaplains and many other professionals from across the country.

For more information, all candidates are encouraged to contact the Neiswanger Institute for Bioethics & Health Policy, Loyola University Chicago Stritch School of Medicine at (708) 327-9200 or e-mail: onlinemasters@lumc.edu
